DESCRIPTIF

A rare find which will delight anyone interested in medieval history, this country house a former commanderie, the fortified stronghold that was the home for the commander of the Knights Templar in the 12th Century. In the grounds is evidence of further walls, towers, a presbytery and the chapel which were all part of the original buildings. The current owners have renovated and enlarged the building to create a beautiful country home.

The house occupies a dominant position, with fabulous views over the surrounding valleys. The interior is impressive: with a grand social space in the original stronghold and a comfortable, more contemporary modern wing with living/dining room and kitchen.

Room layout: Ground floor

- the approach to the house is via a vaulted open sided space [10m2]
- entrance hallway [7m2] with a spiral staircase in walnut, which serves 2 floors
- generous living room [42m2] with exposed beams and a fireplace
- utility room [16m2] and boiler room
- separate WC
- circular cave, with a trap door leading to a small underground cellar [both at the bottom of the tower; the last remaining tower of the original 11]
- a large double aspect living / dining room [38m2] with a galley kitchen [15m2] and French doors to a terrace [15m2] for al fresco dining

First floor

- a landing [5m2] which leads to 2 large bedrooms [30m2 and 28m2], one with an ensuite bathroom [10m2] and WC and a small sitting area [3.5m2] in the tower
- family bathroom [11m2] with
