DESCRIPTION

An Exceptional Home in the South of Brittany

Dating from the 16th century, this Breton stone longère has retained every element of its original character through thoughtful extensions and renovations. The property is defined above all by its extraordinary 12,850 m² landscaped garden: century-old conifers, oaks and maples, spectacular banks of rhododendrons and azaleas, bamboo groves and banana plants that create a rare botanical atmosphere in the heart of a city. A gravel path winds through the grounds connecting the house, the workshop, the lower garden and the millstream.

Approach and Exterior

Entry is through a remote-controlled electric gate onto a private gravel driveway. The granite façade, roofed in natural Breton slate, is complemented by a striking contemporary glass-and-steel studio extension. A pergola terrace draped in wisteria and climbing roses provides a sheltered and completely private outdoor living and dining space.

The grounds extend all the way down to the Steir river, passing beneath the ring road — from the house and garden, no road noise whatsoever can be heard. The dense mature vegetation and natural topography create a remarkable cocoon of calm, just five minutes by car from Quimper's historic city centre.

A 16th-century stone gable and sections of the original granite walls stand on the grounds — vestiges of the original mill that once occupied this site.

Ground Floor

The entrance hall (11 m²) opens into an exceptionally generous lounge..
