DESCRIPTION

Built around 1870 on a site whose history stretches back more than 2,400 years, this extraordinary estate is nestled among vineyards and rolling hills near Puisserguier. A Roman fort is believed to have stood here as early as 400 BC. During the Middle Ages, the site became home to a Templar hospital, while the pilgrimage route to Santiago de Compostela still passes through the estate today.

One of his close friends, the sculptor Louis Paul, also left his mark on the property through a sculpture that can still be admired within the estate. The property was later owned by the family behind the famous Abbaye de Fontfroide.

Today, this remarkable estate offers approximately 768 m² of living space, combining château grandeur, modern comfort, income potential and one of the most fascinating historical settings in southern France.

Beyond the château lies an olive grove, included in th...
